PulseSuite® is a WEMS (Water Enterprise Management Solution) that has been specifically designed and built with Australian Water Utilities to help water executives manage their business. It captures and controls enterprise data to enable the production of any type of report to anyone, anywhere. It takes in-house data seamlessly from any source systems and together with its water specific applications builds a Water Data Repository from which managers can drive their business in the right direction. Clients using PulseSuite® can demonstrate to higher authorities their business is well managed and is achieving efficiencies on an ongoing basis.

WEMS (Water Enterprise Management Solution)

This means you have to be able to produce good information that is convincing to drive the internal changes you need and satisfy the 'observers' watching your every move.

This is where PulseSuite® comes in.

Water is a challenging business these days. Droughts and floods at both ends of the spectrum wreak havoc with infrastructure and assets above and below ground. Overlay the governance requirements of state and local government and it's no wonder that passing an audit has become a real challenge.

It's not enough to be doing a good job or trying to improve you have got to demonstrate with hard facts that you are doing a good job, particularly where efficiencies are concerned. Internal and External stakeholders want more efficiencies whilst attaining better outcomes.
